BAKER AND SHAKESPEARE

EXPLICIT DENIAL OF IMPUTATIONS OF BRIBERY.

The Quebec Scandal—Murphy Publishes a Letter from M. Connolly Containing Grave Accusations—Messrs Baker and Shakespeare Interviewed by the Times.

The publication by editor Tarte, of Quebec, of a letter written by Mr. M. Connolly from Esquimalt to a partner named Murphy, contains a very serious charge, affecting the character of our House of Commons representatives of that time, Messrs. Baker and Shakespeare. In order that the matter may be properly understood, we quote an article from the Toronto Mail just received. The Mail writes:

It is to be regretted that the trial of Mr. Tarte on the charge of libelling Mr. Thomas McGreevy, M. P., was not proceeded with at the last Quebec Assizes. By the delay the characters aspersed remain without vindication and new victims are bespattered with mud. The accusations in respect of which Mr. Tarte is prosecuted are based on affidavits made by Mr. O. E. Murphy, of Quebec, and Mr. R. H. McGreevy, the brother of the complainant. These gentlemen have sworn that the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., of which they were members, secured contracts both from the Dominion Government and from the Quebec Harbor Commission through Mr. Thos. McGreevy's influence, for which money was paid. The exercise of the influence, if the affidavits are true, which has yet to be proven, was a breach of trust, because Mr. McGreevy was a member of the Harbor Board and also a member of Parliament. Mr. McGreevy denies the whole story, and says that while he has received certain sums of money, these sums were in repayment of advances he had made, and were in no respect payments for influence used with the authorities on behalf of the firm. Since the postponement of the case Mr. Tarte has been exceedingly belligerent. He says he intends to expose "McGreevyism," and to show up a system of malversation the parallel to which it would be difficult to find. The other day Mr. Tarte commenced his campaign by publishing two letters signed "M. Connolly," and dated January, 1886. These communications had reference to the Esquimalt graving dock, which Larkin, Connolly & Co. were building. It seems from them that the firm wished the dock extended. With that end in view Mr. Connolly is represented as saying that he had seen Messrs. Baker and Shakespeare, the then members for Victoria, B. C., and had induced them to use their influence with Sir Hector Langevin on behalf of an extension. Mr. Connolly is made to say: 'Nick and I saw the two M.P.'s, Shakespeare and Baker, and I tell you they are a brace of pirates. They thought they ought to have about five thousand dollars for their influence with the Minister of Public Works, but we told them it made very little difference to us whether this dock was extended or not, but that having the plant, etc., in position it would probably be a matter of four or perhaps five thousand dollars to us. Before parting with them, however, we agreed to give them five hundred dollars if they succeeded in their efforts.' Though it is not to be assumed without absolute proof that the letters are genuine, it does happen that in 1886 there was an agitation looking to the enlargement of the dock. Sir Hector Langevin spoke of it in Parliament. He said: 'Representations have been made to have the Government increase the length of the dock; but he thought that inasmuch as we had a contract with the contractors, and the dock was being built in accordance with an arrangement with the British Government, and as we were bound to complete the dock within a certain time in order to receive from the British Government the sum of $250,000, we should not change the dimensions of the dock.' So that if there was an arrangement it was not carried into effect. The firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co. had another contract, that for building the cross wall at Quebec. Mr. Tarte now publishes a letter, signed by Mr. Thos. McGreevy, intimating that he had reached Ottawa that the tenders for cross wall had arrived, that an officer of the Public Works Department was about to make a calculation based upon them, and that 'I will write Tuesday and let you know the result.' Without saying one word as to the merits of the case as between Mr. Tarte and Mr. McGreevy, it is obvious that the charges made are of such public importance as to necessitate an enquiry either by a committee of Parliament or by a Royal commission.

Mr. Shakespeare and Mr. E. Crow Baker were both seen and said they most emphatically and unequivocally deny that there is any truth in the matter, that any money was ever asked for or received from Messrs. Larkin, Connolly & Co. during their (Messrs. E. C. Baker and N. Shakespeare's) political career. The telegram to which such letter must have reference was that sent to Sir Hector Langevin on the 20th January, 1886, urging upon the department the necessity existing for the extension of the dock to save future trouble. That was the only interview the members ever had with the contractors.

In addition to the denials of Messrs. Baker and Shakespeare, a telegram has been received from Mr. M. Connolly, in reply to one sent to him asking for information, to the following effect:

Through joke of Mr. Baker, substance of such a letter was written, but no money was paid or asked by either Messrs. Baker or Shakespeare. Am writing both gentlemen fully in reference to letter. Murphy, who published letter, knows by subsequent letters such a statement had no foundation in fact. Messrs. Baker and Shakespeare were never promised any money, and never asked or received, direct or indirect, one cent from us.

M. CONNOLLY.

Messrs. Baker and Shakespeare are awaiting the arrival of letters referred to. They will, upon their receipt, make statements over their own signatures, and in all probability these will be made under oath.

The senior partner of the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., who is at present in the city, was also seen. Capt. Larkin stated that there was not one word of truth in the story.

BARNUM DYING.

The Greatest Showman on Earth on What is Believed to be His Death Bed.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 17.—P. T. Barnum is believed to be on his death bed. Enquirers at Marina are told that his condition is such as not to create apprehension, but Dr. Hibbard, his physician, told a correspondent tonight that it would not be surprising if the great showman's present attack terminated fatally within the next few days. Barnum's attack of "influenza," said the doctor, "would be severe for one of the most robust constitution, and for one of his advanced years it will seem marvellous if he recovers. He has not the strength necessary to recuperate, and his illness has certainly exhausted nearly all of his remarkably strong vitality. He has not been left alone a moment since the beginning of his illness. Mrs. Barnum, or nurse, or private secretary, have been at the bedside constantly.

THE HONDURAS REVOLT.

Insurgents Utterly Routed—Bogran Pouring Shot and Shell Into the Besieged Army.

TEGUCIGALPA, Nov. 14.—The rebellion, headed by Sanchez, is practically ended. The revolutionary forces have been utterly routed by the army of President Bogran, and he is in full possession of the capital city, with the exception of the barracks, where the remnant of the defeated army is closely imprisoned. If any of the rebel leaders escape death it will be through the clemency of the president.

Skirmishing began before daybreak yesterday, and heavy fighting commenced in the forenoon, lasting all day. The loss so far has been very heavy on both sides. Bogran has Sanchez and his army surrounded in the barracks, which are being bombarded by solid shot and shell. Sanchez's only chance is to make a sortie. If he does not he will become a prisoner, which means not only his death, but that of all his leaders and many soldiers. Bogran has already taken many prisoners. The city is badly wrecked by shells, and the inhabitants, men, women and children, thoroughly terrified. Barillas remained neutral during the trouble. Before to morrow night the capital will surely be in the hands of the president, and the brief rebellion of Sanchez will be only a matter of history, except, perhaps, the executions which will most surely follow the unsuccessful attempts to overthrow the government.

Not Altogether Insane.

William Watts, who has been for some time an inmate of the Jubilee Hospital, suffering from insanity, was deemed a subject for treatment at the asylum at Westminster. Someone inadvertently informed him of the fact that an order had been made for his removal to the royal city, and he seems to have taken the matter very much to heart. He said he knew he was insane to some extent, but not sufficiently so to warrant his incarceration as a lunatic. Without intimating his intention he quietly dressed and left the hospital, so that when provincial officer W. McNeil went up last evening for the purpose of taking him over by the New Westminster boat, there was no Watts to be found. He is still missing, but as a thorough search has been instituted, he will no doubt be soon discovered.

Officer Levin this afternoon found the man Watts in Sauder's restaurant, and took him to the city lock-up to await orders.

The Money Stringency.

Financial circles were animated this morning over the news that the great London house of Baring Bros. was in difficulties. A rumor became current early in the day that this old institution had suspended payment, but enquiry in reliable quarters elicited that the rumor was exaggerated and that the crisis had been tided over. Mr. Ward, manager of the Bank of B. C., said that there is no doubt but that things looked very serious a couple of days ago, but his advices from London now lead him to believe that so far as Barings are concerned the difficulty has been forded. He supposes that to a certain extent the stringency will re-act on this western country, especially in communities where railway construction is going on and where the dependence is on the financial institutions, but beyond there being a little more difficulty in getting money, Victoria will not suffer. Every one is pleased that such an old house as the Barings has been saved.

To My Friends and Patrons.

Having purchased the interest of Mr. W. H. Pennock, my late partner in the business of dealers in diamonds, jewelery and silverware, lately carried on in Victoria as Pennock & Clayton, I beg to announce that I shall in future carry on said business and that large additions, both to present large stock and to the staff of skilled workmen, will be made. Every attention to sales, manufactures and repairs, will be given to all whom may favor me with their order. Being myself a practical jeweller all manufactures and repairs will pass under my personal supervision, and I guarantee satisfaction. I solicit a visit to my establishment. Thanking one and all for past favors, and requesting a continuance thereof,

I am, respectfully,

Misguided Mormons Return Home Disgusted—Another Teller Gone Astray—The Position of Baring Brothers—The O'Shea Divorce Case, etc.

CHAMBERSBURY, Penn., Nov. 17.—The Mormon propaganda in the rural districts of Pennsylvania seems to be a failure. Last spring and winter half a dozen missionaries made their appearance in various parts of Franklin, Fulton and Adams counties, and assiduously but secretly pursued the work of proselyting. They chose the most secluded localities, and at length succeeded in making twenty-five or thirty converts. Shortly after embracing the new religion those converts sold their farms and went out to the promised land of Utah. A few days ago fifteen of them, comprising Steven McPherson and seven of his friends, with seven children, reached Waynesboro, down in the lower end of this country, penniless, hungry and ragged, having returned from Salt Lake on third-class tickets, with short rations. They had been gone just a year, but in that time their ruin had been complete. Their homes in Utah, they say, were in a narrow valley between mountains, over whose tops the sun shone only four hours. Although the land was productive, the cost of living was so high that they exhausted their savings and became thoroughly sick of the venture, and they returned home.

A Missing Teller.

AMSTERDAM, N.Y., Nov. 17.—The whereabouts of Judas E. Smith, late teller of the Merchants' Bank, who is short in his accounts to the amount of nearly $10,000, have not yet been learned. His wife, who was reared in luxury and refinement, is prostrated. She told me to-day that she had no idea where her husband was. She says for some time she noticed something troubling him, but not until recently did he reveal to her the real cause. He had resolved to make the shortage good, and cut it down some $900, and but for the meeting of the merchants with Farmers' bank. He would in the course of three years have done so. Smith was an accountant of rare ability and possessed the confidence of the business community.

PREPARING FOR DISSOLUTION.

Salisbury Setting His House in Order—Ominous Times For Tories.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—There is no doubt that the British Government are setting their house in order and are preparing for a dissolution. But it would be quite rash to infer that the Ministers will "ride for a fall" in the coming session. Lord Salisbury presides over a Cabinet capable as has been seen of greater errors of parliamentary judgment, but as incapable as any other gentleman can be of rebellion against his authority. Yet the Ministers feel that they are unable to calculate what may happen to their bills which cannot be again postponed. Right Hon. William Henry Smith the Government leader in the House of Commons, on Wednesday, issued a whip to the Tory members, urging them to be on hand at the opening of Parliament on 25th inst. The urgency lies in the fact that the Tory party will be called together early in the season and given to understand that the safe passage of the Government through the session depends on the passage of the Irish Land Purchase Bill and probably of the measure hanging upon the budget which will be proposed for the establishing of free schools. But these are matters on which the Government are almost every day receiving unfavorable representations. The Tories who may have to face their constituents next year do not like the Irish Land Purchase Bill, with its vote of £33,000,000 on a security publicly questioned by some of themselves, and without the support of local authority of the Irish members. When the Irish Land Purchase Bill is proposed they know that it will be received by the Opposition with the demand for Irish local government, which they are pledged to give, and upon which a division will be taken probably before Christmas. There need be no doubt that in this week's council of ministers, the proposals to be recommended on the opening of parliament were all framed with a view of weathering the coming session and making further reliance upon the Septennial Act. But the times are dangerous for ministers, and they are so fearful of relaxing the energies of their friends throughout the country that not one of them will speak with anything like confidence as to the further result of this parliament.

A ROYAL MARRIAGE.

The Grand-daughter of Queen Victoria and Prince Schaumberg-Lipp.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The special event of the week will be the marriage of the Princess Victoria, sister of the Emperor and grand-daughter to Queen Victoria to Prince Adolph of Schaumberg-Lipp. The wedding will be celebrated in the royal castle in Berlin, and the attendance will include princes and notables from all parts of Europe, including the Duke of Clarence, representing the royal house of great Britain. There will be a gala performance at the opera and a state dinner will be given by the Empress Frederick on Wednesday. The wedding will be attended with all the formalities usual at the marriage of a Prussian princess, except the torch dance. The Princess Victoria cannot be called beautiful, but she has a pleasing and attractive face, with rather more of the Hohenzollern in it than her brother, the Emperor. Indeed, she resembles her grandfather, the first Kaiser, more than any of the family. She is tall and of a shapely figure, and of a light-hearted, almost merry, disposition. There has never been an attempt to conceal the fact that she was [illegible] Alexander, the ex-Prince of Bulgaria, and was quite willing to marry him. The iron will of Bismarck or political occasions intervened to prevent the match. He always desired to keep Germany out of the Eastern muddle, and leaned to Russia rather than Austria, and looked on Alexander as a dependent on the Viennese court and an enemy of the Czar. Therefore he opposed the union, and succeeded in inducing the old Emperor William to forbid it. Victoria and Alexander were not permitted to meet, and the princess, somewhat heartbroken at first, succumbed to the power or Bismarck. When Prince Frederick came to the throne, the young couple renewed their acquaintance with the friendly acquiescence of the Empress. But Prince Bismarck again interposed his veto. The separation this time was final. Prince Alexander was not slow to seek consolation elsewhere and he is now married himself. The Princess, of course, has no reason to pine for him. Prince Alexander is now as Count Harteman, a colonel in the Austrian army, commanding the 37th Regiment of Infantry, and the Austrian Emperor need not regret that the splendid military talents of the young prince are devoted to his service instead of that of Germany, as this would have been had the love affair with the Princess Victoria culminated in a marriage. The Berlin tradesmen are not altogether satisfied that the Princess receives part of her trousseau from London and Athens. London orders are accounted for by the natural desire on the part of the Princess Royal of England to the bestowal of her patronage. The Empress Frederick presents her daughter with a portion of her trousseau, and it is said that the purse of Queen Victoria has been opened to assist the wedding preparations of her favorite granddaughter. The income of the Princess is about £3,000 yearly and her imperial brother has granted her £40,000 in view of her marriage. Prince Adolf of Schaumberg-Lipp, the bridegroom, is a handsome man of about 30 and a personal friend of the Kaiser. His future wife really seems to have a deep affection for him and the marriage is spoken of as a love match. Prince Adolf has already obtained leave of absence from the army for one year to take his bridal tour after the marriage. They will remain at Potsdam and be present at the celebration of the birthday of the Empress Frederick. On Saturday they will start for Malta and Egypt. The marriage will leave to the bereaved Empress one of her children, the Princess Margaret. She, it is understood, is to become within a year the bride of the Prince of Naples, the heir to the throne of Italy.

THE FINANCIAL CRISIS.

Baring Bros. in Difficulties—The Worst Now Over—Very Near a Panic.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—With the close of this week has culminated a financial crisis which has been gradually coming on for months, although its extent was hardly foreseen even by proud capitalists. The mad rush to withdraw from all sorts of investments abroad, some of them good and many bad, and all involving, at the best, the tying up of many millions of pounds, heretofore held at low interest in Great Britain or invested in Consols, is at the bottom of the great disturbance. The inflation culminated about six months ago, and of late there has been as ardent a desire to realize as there was formerly to invest. Your correspondent has the best authority for saying that the worst is over and that the financial fabric of Great Britain is unshaken. The Bank of England, which raised its rates some time ago in order to protect its reserve, is alive and ready to protect the credit of our really substantial firms, and the directors at a special meeting to-day resolved to take such action as circumstances might require to prevent a panic. There is no genuine cause for apprehension. It has been inevitable that certain embarrassments would occur and the end, perhaps, is not yet. But a general panic is not even within a possibility.

The guarantee fund to Baring Bros. & Company is stated to amount to £10,000,000. The various financial banking and discount houses guaranteeing the same amount state that the crisis is over and the failure of the firm averted. Kidder, Peabody & Co., London, say that they have private advices from London that whatever trouble there may have been has been completely arranged. The trouble was doubtless caused entirely by a depression in Argentine securities. The house is in no way affected. The news in regard to Baring Bros. did not affect Atchison at the opening, but about 10:15 settling orders poured in and found very few buyers at between 27¼ to 28¼. London sold some stocks. The sales in this market were largely on stop orders.

The Times says: The city has passed through a crisis verging upon a panic. The worst is over. The Bank of England by its prompt action has averted a lamentable catastrophe by providing vast reinforcements to its stock of gold to meet exceptional demands. It also prevented the downfall of one of the greatest and most respected English financial houses, would have brought down widespread ruin to a large number of smaller but important firms.

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Messrs. Baring Bros. & Co., who are reported to be in financial difficulties, are the London agents of the Dominion Government, with Messrs. Glyn & Co. as bankers. Here the opinion is that the Dominion will not be a loser, as the money was deposited with the latter firm.

The Two New Rectors.

EDINBURGH, Nov. 15.—Rt. Hon. G. J. Goschen, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was to-day elected Lord Rector of the University of Edinburgh. Mr. Goschen received 1,379 votes and his competitor Sir Charles Russel, 861 votes.

GLASGOW, Nov. 15.—At the election held at the University of Glasgow to-day, R. [illegible] Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, was elected to the office of Lord [illegible] receiving 948 votes against 757 cast for the Earl of Aberdeen.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN.

CHAPTER XVI.

MRS. CAMERON AT HER WORST—AND BEST.

For an instant Mrs. Gretorex and the detective, so dissimilar in all other regards, wore the same expression of disconcertion, but only for an instant. She from policy and he from custom, soon assumed an aspect of self-possession; and Mrs. Gretorex, speaking in behalf of both, observed, with a nonchalance that the other secretly admired:

"We were looking for that poor girl's veil. It seems that it is missing, and that the police imagine it to have been dropped here."

A mortal pallor spread a ghastly light over Genevieve Cameron's face.

"I am at a loss—" she began; but meeting her mother's eye, quailed, and caught hold of the door at her side for support.

"I suppose you know that the young woman who was in the habit of bringing home your dresses died on your wedding-night?" that mother inexorably pursued.

No answer.

"You have not been so absorbed in your new life, that you have not read this in the papers?"

Genevieve shook her head.

"Why don't you say something to some one then? But perhaps you did not known what a secret you were hiding; perhaps the girl had not given you her real name or shown you her real face?"

"Her face?" repeated Mrs. Cameron under her breath.

"Yes, they say, all say, that this girl, this Mildred Farley—Was that the name she gave you?"

Genevieve quivered. Did she nod yes or did that look of hers mean no.

"Looked so much like you that it was really remarkable?"

"Do they say that," she inquired, loosening her furs with a steady hand. "Well, it is odd!" And turning towards the hall, she cried almost gayly. "Come in, Walter. I have been caught in an equivocation and you must help me to reinstate myself."

Promptly at this call, the tall form and fine features of Dr. Cameron appeared on the threshold.

"I do not understand you," said he, "but I will do what I can."

His eye had fallen on Mr. Gryce, and he experienced a vague trouble, that he instinctively sought to hide.

"It is not much," explained Genevieve, looking magnificent in her nonchalant disdain. "I knew Mildred Farley, and I had several dealings with her in this house; but I did not say so, and indeed disclaimed the fact when questioned on the subject, for I hate everything connected with law courts. Besides, she did look astonishingly like me and I knew that I should be made the victim of much unpleasantness if I were forced to appear as a witness before those who knew her. I am sure I am glad to be rid of my secret, for I took no pleasure in keeping it, I assure you."

Her ease, her grace, her confidence in her own charm would have influenced most any many in her favor; but Dr. Cameron was stern in his principles and hated deceit. She saw his altered face and her head began to droop.

"Can I do anything to remedy my fault?"

Mr. Gryce stepped rapidly forward.

"You can tell us whether you left her in this room when you went down to be married."

The stare which she had fixed on her mother a few minutes before was nothing to that which she had bestowed upon the detective at this simple suggestion. It froze Dr. Cameron's blood, for he remembered the change that had taken place in Genevieve at the sight of the woman she now acknowledged to be Mildred Farley, to that instant of relief when she fainted away on his shoulder in the carriage.

"And you know all that too?" she asked. "What clever people you are! Yes, she was with me that night—helped me to dress and arrange my veil. I had not expected her, for she had received her pay when she brought home the last dress, and I had no reason to think she would come;—but her presence was very welcome for all that, and she assisted me, as I say, and when the time came for me to go down, I left her to go home when she got ready. Was there anything wrong in that?"

"Certainly not, madam; we only wish to get at the facts. And was she there when you returned?"

"No. She had disappeared; I had not expected her to remain."

Dr. Cameron had withdrawn from the doorway at this last word of his wife.

"My husband is in a hurry," she explained to the detective. "Is there anything more you would like to ask me about this girl?"

"Well, yes, madam, there is," returned Mr. Gryce suavely. "I should like to know how you became acquainted with her, and what light you can throw upon her death. All these things it would be of service to me to hear, for, as you already know, there is suspicion abroad that she did not meet her death by her own free will and act, but was helped to it by a certain person whom you also know or at least have lately seen."

"Walter can you spare me five minutes?" Mrs. Cameron inquired, going to the door and looking smilingly into the hall.

"Thirty—if you can explain yourself satisfactorily to this man," was the almost stern reply.

She drew back, grieved, probably, at the tone, which was short and sharp.

"I will tell what I know," she murmured. "It is not much, but it may help the detectives a little. First, then, I became acquainted with Mildred Farley through her asking me for work. She heard—I do not know how—that I was going to be married, and she asked if I would not employ her to make my dresses. I laughed, naturally, for though she was a respectable appearing person—I did not know of her likeness to me then, for she did not lift her veil—her name was wholly unknown to me. But she begged so hard for me try her with one dress that I became interested in her and requested her to remove her veil. She did so, but with a hesitation I was at a loss to understand, till her features being disclosed I beheld in them as it were a mirror of my own. Then indeed I became interested in good faith, and asked her question after question. But her replies told me little. She was the daughter of a poor widow who was dying of consumption, and it was her desire to support that mother. Would I try her? She would work with all the more spirit that personally she was a poor imitation of myself—that is the way she put it. I gave her material and allowed her to take my measure, and was so astonished at the final result that I let her make all my dresses; only stipulating that she should always come veiled to the house, as the extraordinary likeness between us would otherwise occasion remark. That I kept all this from you, mother, is not so strange when you consider that the similarity in appearance which interested me in her favor would certainly have prejudiced you against her, your pride being of an older growth than mine, though mine is none too lightly rooted either."

The naïve look, the hand held half out, seemed to arouse Mrs. Gretorex from something like a trance. Sighing, as if with a great relief, she smiled upon her daughter, and for the first time since she had been in the room, looked about for a chair and sat down.

"And now how much more have I to tell about her," proceeded Genevieve, with a thoughtful air. "I don't know anything about her death, and—"

"Excuse me, madam," interrupted Mr. Gryce, with grave respect, "has not this young girl ever spoken to you of her own troubles or anxieties? Did she never mention Julius Molesworth's name to you or confide to you the fact that she contemplated marriage with him?"

"I don't know what to say to that," returned Mrs. Cameron, with an appealing look in her husband's direction. "Help me, Walter. Ought I to answer these questions when I do not know how they will effect a person who unfortunately lies under the shadow of suspicion, but whom I do not believe to be guilty of any crime?"

"I think you had," rejoined her husband, taking a step nearer to her as he spoke. "Answer the detective frankly. I could not be happy if I thought my wife kept back anything she knew, bearing upon so important a matter as this."

His tone was no longer sharp, but studiously gentle.

"What is it you want to know; whether Mildred Farley ever spoke to me of Dr. Molesworth? She did, but guardedly. She informed me that she had had an offer of marriage from the doctor who took care of her mother, but did not say whether she intended accepting or not. I gathered, however, from her manner that she did, but we did not talk on the subject much, for I did not know Dr. Molesworth. A few days before I was married, though, we did a strange thing. In the course of our interviews—and she came quite often to this house—we became quite attached. She was not by any means a common person, and had a spirit and brightness which I admired. To enjoy her companionship and also to procure the rest of which I stood in sore need, I therefore proposed to her that we should take a vacation together. She was not to tell her friends and I was not to tell mine, but we were to meet and go away to some place where we could enjoy our freedom and each other's society without restraint. It was an erratic thing to do, and as I look at it now it appears undignified if not improper; but I was not married then and the dash and romance of the thing pleased me. We accordingly carried it out, and for two days or more we boarded together in a respectable boarding-house in Newark, where we passed for nurse and patient, I being the patient and Mildred the nurse. Mildred seemed to enjoy herself exceedingly, and when we came to part as we did on the morning of my wedding day, she thanked me with the utmost earnestness for what she called the merriest days of her life."

Mrs. Cameron paused; the detective at once took up the thread.

"You parted, you said; may I ask where?"

"On the corner of Broad and Franklin streets. She came back to the city and I went to my cousin's. He did not tell you I had been there but a few hours," she said to her mother, with a half smile.

Mrs. Gretorex's reply was inaudible, but contempt sat on her lip.

"I have ruined my position as the unapproachable Mrs. Gretorex," she murmured, with sly, yet daring sarcasm. "I cannot boast again that I have never mingled with inferiors." She stopped and cast a side-glance at her husband, "Indeed! I wish I had never engaged in it."

He waved his hand indifferently.

"That is of small moment now. The question is, did Mildred Farley take the dose of poison herself or was it administered by Julius Molesworth."

"Yes," chimed in Mr. Gryce. "But Mrs. Cameron does not seem to be in a position to answer it. Unless," he added, "she can tell us with what intentions Miss Farley professed to leave her."

"I understood that she was to be married the same evening as myself," that lady immediately answered.

"You must have been surprised, then when you saw her walk into your room."

"I was more than surprised. I did not know what to make of it."

"And what excuse did she give?"

"Very little. She said she had changed her mind about being married that night, and had come to assist me in my preparations. If she had wished me to know any particulars about herself she would have told me."

"And she said nothing about death or suicide? Nothing about not seeing you again or anything of that kind?"

Mrs. Cameron stopped to think. "Her whole manner was that of one greatly troubled. I can give it as my impression, however, that she was in a state of suppressed emotion great enough to lead her into almost any deed of desperation. I believe she took the poison herself; but mere belief, I am told, does not go for much before a jury."

"No," returned Mr. Gryce, "but it may influence a detective." And bowing low to either lady, he expressed his thanks for their patience. Genevieve slipped out of the room before him, and running up to her husband's side, laid her two hands on his arm and sought to look into his face.

"You are angry with me," she murmured, "justly angry. My conduct appears to you light, and my prevarications unpardonable. There was no guile in my heart, only weakness. I acknowledge it, and I crave for giveness. Is it an impossible thing for you to grant?"

Seizing her by the hands, he drew her further down the hall, into a recess which was lighted by a large window of colored glass.

"Genevieve," he cried, "I am thinking of what you said to Mr. Gryce when he asked you if you left Mildred Farley behind you in your room when you went down to be married. You replied 'Yes,' and yet I distinctly saw you lock the door behind you when you came out, and put the key in your bosom. If there was a woman there whom you did not expect to see when you returned, why did you do this?"

"Because"—she moistened her lips but did not drop her eyes from his gaze,—"because I did not know what I was doing. I was terribly excited, Walter, and then I had that pain; it came upon me just as I was crossing the threshold—from the excitement I suppose,—and what with the one thing and the other, I was all in a daze, and locked the door and took the key away. The mystery to me then and now, is how she managed to escape in my absence."

"Do not let that disturb you," said a soft voice at her side. "It is a matter easily to be explained." And Mr. Gryce, stepping round the angle of the hall, motioned towards the room from which they had just come. "If you will step back with me for a moment I can show you how Miss Farley managed to escape."

Genevieve's eyes dilated, and for an instant she seemed to hesitate. Did this man appear to her like a shadow, and was she beginning to dread his eye and ear.

"I cannot imagine—" she began, but presently thought better of her objections.

"You say there is no other door," declared the detective. "That is true; but there is still a way of escape easy enough for a person who is very anxious to effect one. See there!" And he pointed towards a window at the end of the alcove.

Dr. Cameron advanced. "Ah, I see," he observed. "The window opened out to the roof of a piazza.

"This room has not been entered since that night," resumed Mr. Gryce. "Yet this window, you observe is unlocked. Now if any of the other windows opening upon this roof were also locked, it would require only a little climbing for her to pass into the room adjoining and so by way of the hall to the back stairs."

"It is so," assented the doctor.

"We may regard that matter as settled then," proceeded Mr. Gryce. "But what is still to be decided is why this veil of Miss Farley's should have been found by me under the heap of clothing at our feet."

Dr. Cameron turned and looked at his wife. She had not followed them into the alcove but stood with her eyes fixed on the heap of clothing to which Mr. Gryce had pointed.

"Do you hear, Genevieve?" he asked. "Mr. Gryce wants to know if you can account for this veil of Mildred Farley's being found under this pile of clothing."

She tore her eyes from the spot where they were looking and fixed them upon him.

"How does he know it was Mildred Farley's veil? By the color? I had one of that same color myself. But let me see it; I can soon tell if it is mine or not."

She held out her hand. Mr. Gryce left the alcove and laid the veil in it. She gave it a cursory glance and tossed it back.

"It is not mine," said she, "it must be hers. I was dressing and I wanted an article of clothing. I tore down half the dresses in my closet and flung them on the floor. When Mildred Farley came, she carried them into the alcove to get them out of the way. Her veil must have dropped off her hat as she stooped over them."

How simple! Dr. Cameron's head rose in complete relief. Mrs. Gretorex appeared satisfied and swept from the room; only Mrs. Cameron looked fatigued, harassed and half indignant. The detective saw it but allowed himself to put one more question.

"And was the light-gray veil which was found on Miss Farley, yours?"

"I do not know. I bought so many things about that time I cannot remember what I had. I only know I found no suitable veil when I came to put on my hat."

There was no more to be said. Mr. Gryce again thanked her for her kindness, and politely took his departure. He had no sooner left the house than Mrs. Cameron sought her mother.

"I came this morning to look over my things with you," she declared. "But this man has so tired me with his endless questions that I am no longer fit for it. Won't you take your own time and just dispose of the things yourself? I don't seem to have any heart for it." She took her husband's arm and drew him down the stairs. "Shall I ever make my peace with you?" she murmured.

He smiled a happy smile.

"Since your sins are only those of an ordinary fashionable woman, I will try and forget them, especially as I have confidence you will never repeat what you know gives me pain."

She stopped at the foot of the stairs to kiss him.

"O how I love you!" she murmured. "And how true and devoted a wife I will be if you will only let me." And her eyes gleamed and face looked as if it had been dipped in dew, so bright was the change which his kind words made.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW, SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

ROMANCE OF ROSES.

Whence Three Popular Favorites Derived Their Names.

Interesting Legends Attached to Beautiful Flowers—Marechal Neil's Present to Empress Eugenie—The Bon Silene and Jacqueminot.

Then hey for hardy roses
That bloom the livelong year.

The huge hand bouquet which a season or two ago was one of the indispensable equipments of a fashionable woman has been revived in all its former glory. Miss Dorothy no longer carries in her hand to the opera, the ball or the luncheon her gold-lined bonbonniere and cut-glass vinaigrette, but confines them to her oxydized girdle, while in their stead her two hands—so big are the dimensions—clasp a bouquet of gorgeous blossoms.

The favorite flowers, now that the chrysanthemum season is over, are the hydrangeas, carnations and ever delightful roses, says the Detroit Free Press. These are massed in a solid semisphere and outlined with maiden-hair fern or other dainty green foliage. Of the roses the favorites depend upon the color, the more intense of the reds, yellows and what are called rose colors being generally selected. Of the intermediate or dull shades but few are chosen. The debutante, of course, carries white.

One of the prettiest of the reds, and which enhances the beauty of the red toilet, now the extreme of fashion, is the Papa Gautier, its fine, long, large, red buds making it especially well liked. The good General Jacqueminot, Bon Silene and Marechal Neil will no doubt always remain in favor with rose-worshipers, few of whom perhaps are aware of the interesting legend attached to each and which has been treated by one of our writers of fiction. According to this writer the Marechal Neil was rooted from the stem of one of a whole basket of roses presented by a French peasant to the returning warrior, sick and wounded, after his noted heroism in Italy, when France aided Victor Emanuel in driving out the Austrians. This particular shoot continuing to grow, Neil determined to keep it, and returning to France placed it in the hands of a noted floriculturist, and the next spring it bore four of the loveliest, pale lemon-tinted roses the world has ever seen. After having been awarded the cross of the Legion of Honor he was invited to a reception by the then Empress Eugenie, to whom he presented one of the roses, when she observed: "And so you have proved the truth of what the old abbe used to say in his sermons at Pau about casting the bread upon the waters! Dear me, but he was delicious, that good abbe," continued her majesty, with the softest look of retrospection in her lovely dark eyes. "No, Le Marechal," said she, vivaciously, "I shall christen this rose for you."

The Bon Silene is said to have sprung up from the cleft of a broken statue to the ancient Bishop Silenus. None of the fathers had ever seen such a rose, one of them said: "Let it be called the rose of the good Silenus." The Jacqueminot is a trifle more doubtful in origin. An irate father slew the lover of his daughter, upon which she died of a broken heart. There was a lump of Louis Quinze roses growing on the seat where the lovers were when the General found them. These roses in his anger were red with the youth's blood and the girl's father ordered them taken away. The next spring green shoots grew from the roots again, and one day the gardener said:

"Monsieur, will you come into the garden? There is a miracle to be seen."

"Truly it seemed a miracle had been wrought. One splendid stem had grown up, and on it was a bud half open. It was not pale pink, as the rest had been, but a cardinal, velvety red—a royal rose, full of grace and majesty.

"The man who had never flinched at the charge of the wild Arab when he rode side by side with Kleber, and stood the shock of ten of the Hungarian and Irish lancers, put his hands to his eyes and wept like a boy, and the old gardener turned his face away that he might not see the other's grief, while he softly murmured a prayer for the soul that had gone to God.

"'Shall I cut it down, my master?' said the old man softly after a few minutes of silence.

"'No; it is the flower of God, and let it grow.'"

It grew and flourished, and this is the story told of the origin of the queen of roses, which sprang from a lover's blood.

An extremely beautiful rose bouquet was formed of American Beauties. One carried by a New York young woman was marvelously fragrant and lovely. As well it might be, for the sum paid for it was $100. Fancy handing over ten shining golden eagles for roses for one lucky young woman to carry in her hand one evening. This bouquet was tied with six yards of pink ribbon, which reached to the ground

Ropes Made of Women's Hair.

Speaking before a meeting of the Methodist ministers, Bishop Fowler told of a new heathen temple in the northern part of Japan. It is of enormous size, and the timbers were hauled and placed in their present position by ropes made from the hair of the women of the province. An edict went forth calling for the long hair of the women, and enough was obtained to make two monster ropes—one 17 inches in circumference and 1,400 feet long, the other 10 to 11 inches around and 900 feet long.

SWEETNESS IN WOMEN.

Why Beauties Are Often Obscured by Their Plainer Sisters.

"Selene," in the Baltimore American, writing of the attractiveness of women, compares them to flowers. Those that have beauty and mind, well cultivated, are like the flowers with beauty and fragrance—they are never-ending sources of delight. Others are fair to look upon, but a close inspection discovers a thorn. The third kind are like the homely wall-flower, neither handsome nor graceful, but so full of sweetness that to be near them is joy inexpressible. So many girls, who are brought up with the knowledge that they are gifted with forms and faces of unusual loveliness, depend too much upon those advantages for their success in life. They never realize the necessity of applying themselves to the acquisition of knowledge; they grow to womanhood with meager education, no accomplishments and a much exaggerated opinion of their charms. The result is that they enjoy only for a brief time the prestige for which they are so ambitious.

Some of the plainest women I ever knew were the greatest favorites. Their presence in a room was the signal for good-humored enjoyment. Time never flagged when they were of the party. The lack of mere facial symmetry was forgotten when under the spell of their genial influence. It is not unusual to see a handsome man wedded to a homely woman. We have all heard and, perhaps, made the remark: "Why, what did such a good-looking man ever see in that woman to love?" We are thinking of only the outward appearance, when, in truth, the character of such a woman may be so lovely and attractive to those who know her that none would have her different if they could. It is a great pity when a girl allows herself to grow discontented and unhappy about her looks. When this is the case it is time for her to heed the fairy's warning and shun the mirror by thinking less of appearances and more of other things.

SACHET POWDERS.

The Many Forms in Which They Are Used at the Present Time.

Just now, says Household, there is a general desire or craze for sachet powders, these dainty yet luxurious perfumes which are easily and effectually used in all the novel creations for home decoration, and even in charming dress fancies.

Sachet powders can be correctly placed in every thing made with lining, or in each article to which a tiny sachet bag can be secured or fastened by a loop, bow or ribbon.

In satin-covered, richly-decorated down pillows the powders may be thickly scattered in soft sachet bags with hand-painted designs, in hanging bags, in pincushions, in lined table covers, window, piano and mantel lambrequins, in lampmats, and also in decorated panels of satin, plush or velvet, painted or embroidered.

Bosom sachet bags are used in place of the bag of camphor to prevent the taking of infectious disease, and ladies now carry lovely bags in which their handkerchiefs and scent bottle may be placed, and later on all the fancy muffs of silk, satin, velvet, plush and lace will be scented with the favorite perfume of the owner.

Quaint ornaments for the corners of chairs are laden with perfumes, and perfectly charming are the clusters of small bags in various colors, in bits of ribbon, plush or velvet, suspended by narrow ribbon from lace curtains or gas fixtures.

Then there are boxes made for holding gentlemen's collars and cuffs, satin lined and perfumed, and brush cases, glove cases, moucholn cases, fancy slippers for the bedroom, night-dress cases, jewel cases, and beautiful cases for holding photographs or fancy pictures.

The new book covers for protecting the outside of valuable books are perfumed, and so are baby baskets, work baskets and other dainty baskets, or hanging fancies for holding scraps or odds and ends in bedrooms or library.

DAN REMEMBERED HIM.

A Horse Recognizes a Friend Whom He Has Not Seen for Years.

Taverner tells a good story in the Boston Post apropos of the subject of memory in horses: I happened to be the witness of an odd scene the other day which, when recounted, may possibly amuse the reader. One of those not infrequent, but I must confess usually fictitious necessities had arisen which take me to a stable on this occasion to a large establishment in the vicinity of Chardon street. It was about five o'clock in the afternoon and various people were starting for home, among them a man and woman who had a remarkably intelligent-looking gray horse. Just as he began to trot down the lane by which the stable is reached from the street, a stout "party" who, I noticed, had been watching the gray very intently, suddenly cried out in a loud voice: "Dan, don't you want a piece of cake?" The horse stopped short, pricked up his ears, looked around and uttered a faint whinny of recognition and assent; nor would he go on until the stout man had come forward and explained his interference. It appeared that several years before he had brought the horse from Vermont, where he had owned him for some time, and as the beast was particularly docile he had taught him the true sense of the question, the sudden asking of which brought the animal to a standstill. It is well known that horses never forget a person or place, and scarcely an event. No matter how much time has elapsed or how greatly the horse may have changed in disposition, one word from a former master will establish immediately the old relation between them.

Collecting in Ottawa.

There was wailing and gnashing of teeth the other morning among some twenty-five persons in Ottawa whose names appeared on placards throughout the city as debtors for meat, millinery, furniture, groceries, etc. The posting was done at the instance of the Canadian Collecting Company, whose agent is Mr. R. C. Allan, of the Masonic Chambers, and they offer for sale the accounts mentioned, ranging from $5 to $300. The Canadian Collecting Company have offices in almost every town in the Dominion. It undertakes to collect what business men call bad debts. Before the company commenced operations they sought the advice of three eminent lawyers, who informed them they would be within the law in the course they proposed to pursue. The first thing done is to send the debtor a notice that the account has been placed in the company's hands for collection, and unless the amount is promptly paid legal proceedings will be taken. If this is ineffectual a second notice is sent asking the debtor to call and make a settlement. Should this not meet with success, a list of names for posting is prepared. Each one of these whose name is included received a copy with an intimation that it will be publicly posted unless they come to time. The company are ready to receive small sums regularly from fifty cents to a dollar a month. The list already published has been selected from one containing ninety-five names. Some of the persons whose names have been made public have notified the company's agent that they intend taking legal proceedings. It is stated that over 800 names have been placed in the hands of Mr. Allan for publication by business firms in this city.

THE O'SHEA DIVORCE.

The Defence Decline to Defend—Parnell's Conduct Creates a Sensation.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The O'Shea divorce suit came up for trial in the Divorce Court yesterday. Mr. Justice Butt presided, and a special jury was empanneled to try the case. The court room was densely crowded with relatives and friends of the parties to the suit, and a throng of curious spectators. Messrs. Clarke, Lewis and Coward appeared as counsel for the plaintiff, Captain O'Shea, while the respondent, Mrs. O'Shea, was represented by Messrs. Lockwood and Pritchard. Mr. McCall was present to take charge of the interests of Mrs. Steel, sister of Mrs. O'Shea. Mr. Parnell was neither present nor represented by counsel when the court was opened, and only one prominent person connected with the case as principal was present, Captain O'Shea. The counsel for the respondent, Mrs. O'Shea, stated that it was not his intention to cross-examine any witness or to call any witness on the part of his client, nor would be participate in the proceedings. An immense sensation was caused by this announcement, as the action of the defence condemns Mr. Parnell to pay very heavy costs. The course pursued by Mr. Lockwood, counsel for Mrs. O'Shea, in abandoning all intention either to cross-examine or call witnesses on behalf of the defence, has very materially altered the position of the famous case. Mr. Clarke, counsel for Capt. O'Shea, in calling attention to the changed condition of affairs, said that the prosecution found itself in court with no respondent to participate in the conduct of the defence. In response to a question by Mr. Justice Butt, Mr. Clarke said the counsel for the plaintiff hae been unable to find that any one was in court to appear for Mr. Parnell, and that the suit would therefore seem to be undefended.

Beautiful Women.

The magical efforts of Wisdom's Robertine as a beautifer and preserver of the complexion have been attested by thousands of leading ladies of society and the stage. It is the only article ever discovered which gives a natural and beautiful tint to the complexion, removing tan, sunburn, freckles and all roughness of the face and arms, leaving the skin soft, smooth and velvety. All remarks on its delightfuly cooling and refreshing properties, a distinction not found in any other similar article known. D. E. Campbell, agent.

THE GOVERNMENT AS AN OBJECT GLASS.

Replying to an article which recently appeared in this paper, anent the triangularity of the political situation, the News is more reasonable than hitherto, owing probably, to its having reached the conclusion that coalescence with the Government means the extinguishment of the Independents. Of course its remarks do not convey the idea of profound respect for the Opposition which is no more than natural, but its general tone in respect to the potentialities of the Independents is considerably modified. This session, says the News in effect, the Independents do not expect to achieve much, but before the ordinary life of the parliament has run out they expect to carry every one of the desired reforms, or dissolve sooner, and appeal to the people. Thus we are made to understand that the Independents expect to achieve their ends as powers behind the throne. Now this is modest. The Independents furnish the policy, the Government give it effect. This scheme, we are bound to say, will meet the approval of the Government. For our part, however, we fail to see the philosophy of the thing. We fail to understand why the Independents should be content to have their policy reflected through the Government; we fail to see how the Government can reflect the policy of the Independents without stultifying themselves. It is a self-evident proposition, that under responsible government the Government cannot reflect the policy of the Opposition, nor yet the Opposition permit their policy to be administered by others than themselves. What constitutes a political party? Is it the mere enunciation of a policy? That which constitutes a political party is not merely a declaration of principles, but the ability to give them practical effect. Can a party be said to have any standing that is dimly reflected through its opponents? Can the News reasonably expect of the Government that they will reflect their own and the policy of the Independents at the same time? We may observe in this connection that it is not sufficient that a minority can effect a modification of a government's policy, where the system of responsible government obtains. Under this system no opposition that have any snap, and are honest with themselves, will consent to the administration of their policy by their political foes. The claim of an opposition to recognition rests not merely on their having enunciated a policy, but on their supposed ability to execute it. Any person can enunciate a policy. The question arises, can he give it practical effect, and if not he who can? The presumption is that he alone is fit to undertake it. Now the Independents have a policy, but have they the executive ability to make it good? It is presumed that they have, and that no one else has, and hence, besides enunciating a policy they are bound to attempt to "turn the rascals out." This is the mission of an opposition. They cannot consent in justice to themselves that their policy should filter through a gang of venal intermediaries—in other words, agents—men who have no interest in it beyond drawing their salaries. But, as we understand the News, this is exactly what the Independents propose doing. Grind our axes, say they in effect to the Government, and you may grind yours in peace. Is this the proper attitude for reformers? Can the Independents afford to entrust the carrying out of their policy to a gang who are incapable of carrying out their own? If, hitherto, the affairs of this province had been managed with consummate skill, and the causes which had given rise to the Independents were of a technical rather than of a specific character, we could fall into the News' way of thinking. But the reverse has been the case. The blunders of the Government have utterly discredited them as being possessed of ordinary acumen, and the "for cause" to which the Independents owe their birth is a robust parent. It is reasonable to expect that the reforms so dear to the Independent heart will be fairly reflected through the medium of a coterie whose blunders are equivalent to crimes? Except that the fundamental idea of the Independents is, that having a policy they only are fit to carry it out, they have lived in vain. If the Independents established themselves with the idea that they can effect substantial reforms through the present Government they simply delude themselves, and have already sowed the seeds of their own disintegration. Of course, there is no telling what will transpire when the House meets. We have great faith in the intelligence and in the integrity of purpose of the Independents. But if they expect to effect reform through the Government, it they expect to see their shining virtues properly reflected through the opaque medium of the present governing object glass, they will be fooled. The Independents, as reflected by the News, either lack worldly wisdom or are still too fond of "Honest JOHN" to sever all connection with his seductive personality.

THE FINANCIAL PANIC.

The financial world barely escaped another black Friday such as that when the great discounting firm of OVEREND, GURNEY & Co., of London, collapsed. Last Friday it was known that a great financial firm in London was in difficulties, and now we have the astounding news that it was the firm of BARING Bros., & Co. This firm, which has been in business for more than a century, was long considered the most conservative of the great financial houses in London. Two of its members were Chancellors of the Exchequer, in Sir ROBERT PEEL's government. Their transactions all over the world have been on a gigantic scale, but up till lately, as we have said, their business was conducted in the most conservative manner. Recently they have floated and endorsed bonds of the River Platte government, issued against land sales. The interest on these bonds had to be remitted to them in London, but on Friday last it was not forthcoming. The telegraph says they had £15,000,000 sterling due on that day. We can scarcely credit the amount, and probably it is a mistake for dollars. But they were so far involved that the bank of England, guaranteed by other leading financial firms, has advanced them $10,000,000. This was done after consultation with all the leading financiers in London, so, doubtless their affairs had been investigated, and it was found that they were more than solvent. Still, it is a lamentable collapse of a great reputation. The firm may go on, but it can never be the eminent firm which it has been up to this time. Many are of opinion that the panic, which has been allayed for a time, may occur again, unless a stop is put to the investment by England of large sums of money in foreign enterprises, over which the investors have no control, and in "trusts" in the United States attempting to carry on breweries and such businesses, which they cannot understand.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

The hanging of BIRCHALL has revived the question of capital punishment, and one writer ("Clementina" in the Globe) strongly negatives the practice. She insists that there should be no capital punishment whatever upon circumstantial evidence. Murderers, she holds, should be treated like other madmen. Beside the act of murder in which the victim is stricken down suddenly and perhaps painlessly, that of keeping the halter around the murderers neck for months, and even years, is the refinement of cruelty and that without the least serving as a deterrent. Further, the writer asks: "Will those whose believe in eternal punishment advocate a measure which hurls an erring fellow's soul into perdition?"

Whatever people may think of the death penalty it did not have its origin in cruelty, but in the well founded idea that the constitution of man was such that while imprisonment for life might act as a check only the death penalty would operate as a deterrent. If the death penalty will not check murder nothing else will. Life is sweet, and the surety of being hanged is bound to cause men to take a second thought. For such men as BIRCHALL no penalty, however severe, will prevent the perpetration of murder, but there are men not dishonest but of a peculiarly passionate and vindictive temper upon whom the death penalty certainly acts as a deterrent. Recollecting the law they hesitate, and hesitation saves them crime. As to the cruelty of the death penalty in point of the mental suffering the victim must endure during the interval of his condemnation and execution, it is not so intense as most people suppose. The condemned settles down and accepts his fate as does the consumptive or any person stricken with a mortal disease. Nevertheless, we question the propriety of hanging a man on purely circumstantial evidence. If it be true that there is no surer evidence, it is also true that when innocent persons once become involved in its meshes their case is hopeless. It bears as hardly on the innocent as on the guilty. The extrication of the innocent from its complicated meshes depends more on luck than logic. Hanging should not be abolished, but it should be used with discretion. No man should be hanged where an iota of doubt as to his guilt remains.

REMEDY FOR APOPLEXY.

According to the Medical Bulletin, a remedy has been found for apoplexy, in the hypodermic use of tartarized antimony. Dr. F. BIRD, writing on the subject mentions three cases. He says:

The first was that of a man whose case had been pronounced hopeless by three physicians. No medicine could be administered by the mouth, and bloodletting was inadmissible. He immediately injected half a grain of antimony—tartar emetic—hypodermically, and very soon the pulse began to fall, and the hurried respiration abated. In half an hour he repeated the operation, and soon found all the bad symptoms subsiding, and the patient passed a quiet night. Next morning he was perfectly conscious, and made a rapid recovery so far as the apoplexy was concerned. His next case was a Mr. Klein, who had fallen to the floor very suddenly, but with symptoms very different from those of the previous case. This man had violent convulsions, a rapid and full pulse, with stertorous breathing. Two physicians were with him, and regarded the case as in extremis. At Dr. Bird's suggestion one of them injected a fourth of a grain of antimony hypodermically, and in a few minutes the stertorous breathing became less marked, the pulse began to fall, and the convulsions became less violent. The doctor injected another fourth of a grain of antimony, when all the violent symptoms abated. Two hours afterward the man sat up and was taken to his home.

In another instance he was called in the night to see a Mr. Hance, who was seized in a manner similar to the foregoing cases. He was convulsed; skin hot and red; pulse greatly accelerated, but not very full or strong. Respiration was greatly quickened, and breathing stertorous. He was perfectly unconscious. Dr. Bird resorted at once to the antimony, using a fourth of a grain, which had a marked effect upon the symptoms. In about twenty minutes he repeated the dose, and had the satisfaction of seeing all the symptoms subside, and a state of semi-consciousness return. In this case, because of the general turgidness of the face and neighboring integuments, he had a few cups applied, but allowed but little blood to be taken. There was no further trouble, and in a few days he was able to resume business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Having read a few chapters of BIRCHALL's life, written by himself and published in the Mail, we are confirmed in our conviction that the unfortunate man deserved death. The life that is pictured could scarcely have a good ending.

FRED WHITE, comptroller of the Mounted Police, on being questioned by the Ottawa Free Press said that commissioner HERCHMER, of the N. W. M. P., had resigned. The story about Col. OTTER as his successor, however, was news to him.

Work on the Calgary sewers commenced last week, the revised plans of KENNEDY, of Owen Sound, having been accepted by the council. A large force of men, chiefly graders from the Edmonton road, will be put to work, and the laying of pipes will be hurried through before the winter sets in.

Dr. STOECKER, the German Court Chaplain who has been dismissed, is one of those who influenced the Emperor WILLIAM against his father, the late Emperor FREDERICK, and who attempted to persecute the Empress FREDERICK. He is a fierce Jew-baiter and it was feared at one time had impressed the Emperor with his views. One by one the Emperor has discarded the men who drew him away from the influence of his parents toward the end of the reign of his grandfather. Experience seems to have convinced the Emperor that the Emperor and Empress FREDERICK's counsel and policy were the only safe and wise ones. His policy far more resembles that of his father than that of his grandfather.

Those who are interested in the growth of responsible government may find some instruction in in the conflict now going on in the Legislature of the Northwest Territories. The Lieut-Governor has been choosing his advisers from persons belonging to the party which is in a minority in the Legislature. The majority cannot directly prevent him from doing so, but they can use their power in such a way as to make a great deal of trouble for his honor. When his advisers introduced bills which under a regular system of responsible government would be called government measures, the majority vote the measures down and place the so-called government in a ridiculous position. As the Lieut-Governor on his part can veto any measures the majority may pass, it is not surprising that the result is a deadlock in legislation.

The Political Protectionists of Canada, remarks the Montreal Witness, rejoicing over the utter defeat of the protectionist of the United States, whose policy they imitated, is a suggestive spectacle. Another victory for tariff reform in 1892 in the United States would, doubtless, set this section of the party wild with joy, and, perhaps, they will once more be found declaring themselves "free traders in theory" who would be "free traders in practice if only their neighbors would consent to free trade." "Reciprocity of trade — or reciprocity of tariff" would again become the party cry with "reciprocity of trade," as the object aimed at instead of "a high protectionist tariff." We do not hear of manufacturing protectionists throwing up their hats for joy over the revolt of the people of the United States against protection. If the government organs are not careful they will, while trying to deceive the farmers into believing that they are not protectionists of the same kind as Mr. McKINLEY and those of the United States, really deceive the manufacturers, who do not relish this jouncing with tariff reform.

The visit of the Dominion Minister of Finance, Mr. Foster, to the West Indies for the purpose of cultivating trade relations is watched with some interest, especially by those New England merchants who have hitherto practically controlled the trade of the West Indies with the United States. At present the United States is far ahead of Canada in all the West Indian markets. The British possessions in the West Indies annually purchase from the United States goods to the value of $16,000,000, or ten times as much as they take from the Dominion. The principal exports of the States to those islands are: Animals, $307,000; bread and biscuits, $297,000; corn and cornmeal, $489,000; oats, $60,000; wheat and flour, $2,084,000; carriages, $79,000; chemicals and drugs, $82,000; fish, $96,000; hay, $29,000; iron and steel, $196,000; leather, including boots and shoes, $118,000; musical instruments, $15,000; oil cake, $176,000; beef, $200,000; pickled pork, $605,000; lard, $231,000; dairy products, $362,000; vegetables, $118,000; and lumber and furniture, $850,000. Some of these articles Canada could not supply, but agricultural products, fish and lumber, which make up the bulk of the exports, she can sell as cheaply as the States can.

VICTORIA FLOUR MILLS.

Fairly Started at Work—Excellent Quality of Flour Turned Out.

Invitations were issued to representatives of the press to be present at a sort of trial trip of the Victoria Roller Mills this afternoon. When the mills were visited everything was in ship-shape order and running smoothly, and under the guidance of Mr. E. Rees, the millwright, who had charge of the erection of the machinery, a tour of inspection was made of the building. The building that was formerly the Rice Mills has been added to and overhauled, an extra storey built, and now that part of it fronting Store street is used as a flour mill, the back portion being utilized as a rice mill. To describe the flour mill it would be in order to commence where the wheat is first handled. In the basement are two smut machines, a cockle mill and a cleaner. Here, too, is a huge pair of scales, on which the wheat is weighed in the sacks. It is then emptied into shutes, and passes through the cleaners and smuts, and from them is elevated to the first floor, where six double sets of roller mills rapidly reduce the grains of wheat to flour. But in this flour are middlings, shorts and bran. This has to be all taken out before the flour is finished. From the rollers the ground wheat is elevated to the top story, where nine bolts or silks are located. Here the flour is separated from the bran, etc. On the same floor are three dust collectors, as nothing is allowed to be wasted about a flour mill. From the bolts the flour is carried to four large packers or storage bins, which extend down to the second floor, where the flour is drawn off into sacks or barrels.

On the second floor are five purifiers, through which the middlings are put that the flour may be all saved. Here are also two bran dusters, used for beating particle of flour out of the bran. The middlings purifiers are the latest model, as in fact is all of the machinery, which has been supplied by Goldie, McCulloch & Company, of Galt, Ontario, and set up here under the direction of Mr. E. Rees, the millwright. Mr. J. Townsley, the miller has also been at the work meantime, and a first class job has been made. The machinery is handily arranged, and the system of shutes and elevators is so perfect that one or more of the machines can be thrown out without interfering with the other.

Just now the power of the large Corliss engine is not sufficient to drive both the flour and rice mills, and alternate shifts will be taken, the engine kept running night and day, two shifts of workmen being kept on. It is very probable, however, that the present engine will be compounded when the power will be plenty to do the work.

The flour turned out is of the finest quality, and Victorians will now be able to use a home manufactured article, being no longer dependent on imported goods for the staff of life.

PORT CRESCENT'S PROGRESS.

Work on the Various Improvements Going Ahead Rapidly—Buildings Springing Up.

Mr. C. G. Ballentyne, of Dalby, Ballentyne & Claxton, arrived in town Saturday evening from a visit to Port Crescent. Speaking to a TIMES reporter this morning he said he had thoroughly inspected the extent of the improvements that are being carried on there, and expressed surprise at the magnitude of the work already done; and the solidity and permanency of its character. The operations in connection with the clearing of the Victoria, Port Crescent and Chehalis Railroad right of way are progressing very favorably. Contracts have been let covering a distance of about fifteen miles, over the greater portion of which the men are now at work.

Mr. Ballentyne was informed that it is the intention of the company to let the contracts for the construction of the bridges for this end of the road in January, and the contracts for grading in February. With these objects in view, the contractors for the clearing of the right of way are being pushed in their work to the greatest extent possible.

The magnificent roadway of the company, extending from the harbor up the bluff to the townsite, is now about completed, at a cost of something like $27,000. This is one of the finest pieces of work of that character on the coast. It has a fine roadbed 60 feet wide and 1,800 feet long, well side-walked from the bottom to the top. The work in connection with the extension of Port Crescent avenue, the principal thoroughfare of the future city, is also making very favorable progress towards completion, and in the course of a few days a team will be able to draw a load of any weight from one end of it to the other.

The clearing of the townsite is being pushed along with energy, although the difficulties in the way are very great, as the size and number of the forest's giants are obstacles not easily to be overcome.

The breakwater extension has been carried out 150 feet or more. This is also a work of great magnitude and difficulty, and when finished will make Port Crescent one of the snuggest and most convenient harbors on the coast—not so large as some of the others, perhaps, but capable of floating from 80 to 100 ships, leaving about four acres swinging room for each.

Some very neat residences have already been erected on the townsite, several stores are in operation and are doing well, and several others are contemplated. Had it not been for the refusal of the Port Crescent Improvement Company to grant permission for the erection of buildings during clearing operations there is no doubt that there would now be a town of very respectable size there. But as these restrictions have now been removed and owners of lots are at liberty to build, extensive preparations are being made and some very fine buildings will be erected in the near future.

WHEN JUSTIFIABLE.

A Legal Opinion on the Shooting of Prisoners by Officers.

A circular has been issued from the Attorney-General's office to the warders at the provincial jails, which treats of the legality or otherwise of the shooting of escaping prisoners. The opinion given is that there are hardly any cases where shooting is justifiable, and then only in the case where the prisoners are charged with felony, and only after every other means has been used to overpower the prisoner.

If a prisoner take to flight he is held to be resisting an officer, and if such prisoner be charged with a felony, then after all other means have been exhausted, the firearm can be resorted to. The same argument can be used when a warrant is being served and the prisoner resists.

In cases of misdemeanor only, however, under no circumstances is an officer to fire on an escaping or resisting prisoner, as the law holds that it is better for a party charged with dismeanor to escape than to shed blood. The law is quoted at length in the circular, section and chapter being given where it bears on the matter, and the same will no doubt prove a great benefit to police officers on the discharge of their duty.

SAVE YOUR EYESIGHT.

Take Advantage of the Present Opportunity.—Be Wise in time.

The fact that there is no resident professional optician this side of San Francisco is one reason why Mr. Seward's visit to this city and Portland, Oregon, has been so successful. In Victoria, aside from the large number of near-sighted, far-sighted, or old sighted eyes, Mr. Seward has succeeded in correcting some twenty-five especially complicated defective cases, who have never before been able to have correct glasses adjusted, at any price. A portion of this work has been somewhat expensive, but the result has been satisfactorily in all cases. A large number of prominent and influential citizens of Victoria have kindly volunteered the use of their names as reference. These, however, will not be published, as Mr. Seward's work speaks for itself and no further reference is now necessary. He has demonstrated, to the satisfaction of all concerned, his ability in adapting his superior lenses to any and all kinds of defective eyesight, and it remains only to state that he will leave for New York in a few weeks, and would therefore urge upon those intending to call the importance of doing so without delay. Office, corner Yates and Douglas streets, over Cochrane & Munn's drug store.

THE DOUGLAS CHILDREN.

Judgment Given in the Divisional Court this Afternoon.

This afternoon Chief Justice Begbie and Justices McCreight and Walkem sat as a divisional court to give judgment in the case of Harris vs. Douglas, in the case of the children of the late Mr. Douglas as to their religious faith.

The Chief Justice in giving the judgment of the court, prefaced the same by a resume of the case, and spoke of the different points at issue. The conclusion arrived at, was that as the children had been three and one-half years educated as Roman Catholics, that it would be highly injurious to their moral perceptions to forcibly compel them to change their religion, as the eldest had arrived at an age, 12 years, whereby such a change would be injudicious, consequently Justice Drake's decision should be set aside.—Costs to be paid out of the estate.

FINAL DESTINY OF THE EARTH.

A Curious Speculation—The Future of the World Foretold by Mathematics.

In the Dublin Review, the Rev. J. S. Vaughan sets forth a curious speculation of his own as to the ultimate destiny of the earth. His theory is that the world will continue until every particle of its immense bulk has passed through human bodies, and the whole of its enormous weight will be just sufficent to furnish forth new bodies for the human race when the trumpet sounds for the Resurrection! He calculates that the dead weight of human corpses amounts to 2,000,000,000 tons per century at present, and the total is going up. At present he thinks 100,000 persons die every 24 hours, when the population of the world is only 1,600,000,000. In 4,000 years, the population of this planet ought to rise to 310,000,000,000,000,000. Now the total weight, in round numbers of the earth is 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000. The number of the total aggregate of souls at the Last Day Mr Vaughan does not venture to calculate, but he thinks that it is a divine design to allow human beings to increase and multiply until the whole of the existing globe will just be sufficient to furnish forth the substance of their risen bodies, whether they be the bodies of saints in glory or of the reprobates in hell. This is his theory of the Resurrection:—

Then the rising bodies, flying at a tangent from the earth, will leave nothing behind them of a material world. The ball of earth, which a moment before was whole and entire, will then—like the ball formed by a swarm of bees, when the bees fly off—be broken up and divided into as many parts as there are human beings; for every soul will depart, bearing away its glorified body as an independent and distinct entity. The earth will no longer exist, as we now know it; it will be, indeed, as St. Peter says, "a new earth," an earth no longer moving round the sun as a dark and sullen mass, but an earth consisting of the unnumbered hosts of glorified human forms revolving for all eternity around the divine Sun of eternal justice in heaven.

In making even the roughest calculation we must not fail to bear in mind the following facts:—

1st. That every infadt that dies will claim a perfect and fully-developed body at the time of its resurrection, and will rise in a state of perfect manhood.

2ndly. That every soul created, even though it is never brought forth alive from its mother's womb, yea, even though it depart this life immediately after conception, will possess a like claim to the matured body of an adult.

3rdly. That thousands of infants perish annually, of whose existence no one but their parents know anything. Every such life must be added to the vast myriad of those to whom the earth will have to furnish a corporeal form.

Such is a brief statement of the theory. There is something fascinating in the idea of the whole of our present habitation: the seas, the mountains, and wooded plains, and massive monuments, and all else on earth, some day forming a part of ourselves! It certainly gives a wider meaning to the idea of the resurrection; since on this theory the very earth itself will rise to a newness of life in the bodies of the re-fashioned race of men.

THE MAYOR OF NEW YORK.

Reared in a Rumhole—A Thoroughly Dishonest Man.

New York Evening Post.—Hugh J. Grant, familiarly known among his political associates as "Hughey," is the son of a liquor dealer, and inherited large liquor properties in the city; claims to be a lawyer; is fond of horses; for several years he followed the race tracks, etc.; is now mayor of the city. He was brought up by his guardian, a pawnbroker, named McAleenan, who launched him in political life in 1883 as a candidate for alderman. He served two terms as alderman, and was a member of the "Boodle" board of 1884. At that time he acquired a reputation for honesty by not being one of those who were accused of sharing in the boodle. On the strength of this reputation, Tammany, in the fall of 1884, nominated him for mayor, and he was defeated by William R. Grace. He borrowed large sums of money from McAleenan, the pawnbroker, with which to pay his mayoralty campaign expenses, which were so heavy that his fortune was seriously crippled. In consideration of Grant's losses and defeat, Tammany nominated him for the shrievalty in 1885, and he was elected. His administration as sheriff has recently been exposed. It has been shown that he entered into an unlawful bargain with William A. Topping, the auctioneer, and divided with him illegal fees amounting to $42,497. At the same time he took for himself all the largest "extra compensation" fees, which were also illegal, thus exacting double fees from the same creditors. He has admitted that while sheriff he gave Croker's infant daughter two gifts, of about $5,000 each, of money in an envelope, on two occasions within a few months of each other, and has claimed that he did so as the child's godfather. The grand jury made Grant's administration of the shrievalty the subject of a presentment, saying that it had been "tainted and corrupt;" that it had been characterized "by an utter subversion of the public interests to personal gain, and the employment of men of ignorance and cupidity to discharge its ordinary duties;" that the rights of persons whose property had been placed in the sheriff's custody had been "persistently ignored," and that the management of the office had been "mercenary, slovenly and wholly indecent."

BEAVER TO REVELSTOKE.

Two Up Country Miners Start on an Exploratory Tour up the Columbia.

The days of adventure in this western country have not ended, after all, with the old timers who are either among the dead departed or living in comfortable retirement after their early and stormy career. The Kootenay Star gives a story of Geo. B. Nagle and Tom Horne, old timers, woodsmen and miners, having an ambition to make the trip from Beaver to Revelstoke by way of the Columbia, in a spirit of adventure and with a view to "size up the country" in relation to its timber and mineral resources, having made preparations by building a boat calculated to run the shallows and rapids of the river without trouble, and left Beaver on Monday October 20th at noon. They reached Surprise rapids, twenty miles below, the first day. Although called rapids they are a series of cascades two and a half to three miles long, which took two days to get over. The upper shute it was found necessary to portage, but they run the lower shute, which proved to be very dangerous, the boat striking a rock which threw it nearly on end, but they got over without damage except shipping a couple of barrels of water. They found John McDonald and a German named August Bergman, camped at the foot of the rapids, where they had built a cabin and put in supplies for a winter campaign hunting, the principal game being beaver, caribou and martin—a good section for fur-bearing animals of various kinds.

The old Moberly trail from Donald down the Columbia as far as Canoe river, or to within a few miles of it, which was cut out when explorations for the railroad route were being prosecuted, is still a well marked trail along the east side of the river, and would require but little expended on it to put it in good order. Eighteen miles below Surprise rapids is Kinbasket Lake, seven to eight miles long and two to three wide, a beautiful body of water, of great depth, with bluff rocky shores and a fine gravelly beach nearly all round it

The observations made on the timber of that section, confirms the report of Arthur St. Cyr, which was published in the Star last week, with this exception in its favor, that it did not overstate the size of the trees, but rather the contrary.

At 18-Mile Rapids between Kinbasket Lake and Canoe River, in its present stage of shallow water, the river was found to be very bad, and in three places the boat had to be lowered with a line. It was here at the lower rapids, where a man named Johnston in 1885 was drowned on the trip round with a party from Donald. A record of the accident is posted near by as a warning to other navigators, of the dangerous character of the rapids.

Messrs. Nagle and Horne spent four days at the old Hudson Bay Boat encampment near the mouth of Wood River and on Canoe river, which they ascended about twenty-five miles with a canoe as far as the shallow water permitted, and thence on foot. Both canoe and Wood rivers, as far as observed, appear to have the usual quantity of burned and standing timber.

The 50 miles to Smith creek were made in two days. Here they found the Columbia River Hydraulic Company in first class condition, all parties satisfied with what they were doing, which it must be inferred was very good to reward the labor of the seven men employed.

From Smith Creek to Revelstoke, Death Rapids was run without accident, and at a place a few miles below the boat was lowered with a line, but at the head of six mile canyon, which is six miles above Revelstoke, they found the most difficult water this side of Canoe River.

Prospecting for gold at the mouths of the various streams running into the Columbia on both sides was systematically carried on, and colors were found almost without exception in every pan of dirt washed, but more especially was this the case, and better showings were found, in the creeks which flow out of the Selkirks.

Signs of game were seen at various points, and one cariboo was shot on Canoe River, and the horns brought in. The trip occupied two weeks.

NOTES FROM THE INTERIOR.

Men and Matters Spoken of in the Inland Sentinel and Kootenay Star.

From the Kamloops Sentinel.]

The football season is on at the coast. A lover of that vigorous game would like to know if there are not enough kickers in Kamloops to get up a club.

There was no meeting to organize a rifle club this week, but one for that purpose will be held at the Inland Armory next Tuesday evening. Notices have been issued to crack shots in the community and a good inaugural meeting is looked for.

The west bound passenger train which should have arrived in Kamloops on Wednesday night did not reach here till about 10 o'clock Thursday morning. The delay was caused by a heavy train, it being composed of ten coaches, well filled with passengers.

The annual election of trustees for the R. C. Church, Kamloops, was held on Sunday last, the following officers being elected for the ensuing year: Mr. Alfred Morris, president; J. F. Smith, secretary; and Messrs. J. A. McDonald, J. E. Saucier and R. Hearn.

Mr. John Morrison of White Valley was here and emphatically denies the report of heavy snow in his valley.

The exchanges in land values still continue. Numerous transactions in White Valley, Mission Valley and the west side of Okanagan Lake are reported.

The Colonist says: "The band of wild horses that make Joe Haller's mountain, between Clinton and Dog Creek, their headquarters, are reported to be growing more and more a nuisance. A resident of that section at present in the city, says that they cannot be corralled, as they take to the woods and few of them are branded. The settlers are anxious for the passage of a law authorizing their extermination by the use of the rifle." Some one must have been "stuffing" the Colonist.

A subscription list was circulated among the members and adherents of the Church of England this week with the object of securing money to reduce the church debt, with very gratifying results, the sum of $300 being subscribed.

The steamer Marion is being put in readiness for business again. When the Lytton stops running, the Marion will keep up communication between here and Sproat as long as possible.

From the Kootenay Star.]

O. H. Allen has begun excavating for the foundation of a brewery which he will build on the north side of the railroad track. He will rush the work with all the force he can muster, and expects to be brewing within a month. His location is near the river, and he will rely on that for his water.

The highbinders have opened a Masonic Lodge in Revelstoke.

The railroad boys got up a dance at the C. P. R. Hotel on Thursday evening. A blind itinerant fiddler happened along and he was thus utilized.

D. C. McGillivray and Frank Lang, have come in from French creek, which they left on Wednesday November 5th. The Consolation Company had been four days on their pay-streak and were taking out about the same that Mr. Goodwin did last year. They will not return this winter, Lang being troubled with rheumatism, and McGillivray complaining that the air in the tunnel is becoming unhealthy for his lungs. Hunker, McDonald and the China cook are still working.

P. M. Walker, Lochie McDonald, Jack Evans, and Charles Holton, are placer mining on the Lardeau. Two of them are sinking a shaft, and two are washing. They are believed to be doing well, and their long stay in that locality is proof of it. They have some nice coarse gold on hand. Mr. Stobart is washing by himself not far from the other party.

A sample lot of two tons of gold ore has been received at the smelter this week, shipped in by M. S. Davys. It is from Rover creek, which runs into the Kootenay river between Sproat and Nelson. The sample runs high in the yellow metal.

VICTORIA'S JUSTICE MILL.

Not Much Grist Turned Out by His Honor This Morning.

Edwin Johnson, S.M., occupied the bench at the police court this morning, Hon. A. N. Richards being absent from the city. The usual Monday morning drunks having been disposed of, Jim, an Indian, was called for having a bottle of whiskey in his possession. For some time the police were quite uncertain what the bottle found in Jim's possession contained, for although Scotch whiskey was printed on the label, that direction had been criminally libeled. Indian whiskey as a rule is bad enough; but a police officer who is a pretty good judge, pronounced the stuff out of the question, it being a mixture of alcohol, sugar and water, which if Jim had finished, would have been enough punishment. But he hadn't even opened the bottle, so a fine of $25 was imposed.

Robt. Barnett, who on Saturday last fainted in the dock while a charge of assault was being proved against him, appeared again this morning, and pleaded guilty to save any further bother, and a fine of $10 and $2 costs was imposed.

Ah Fook, a Chinese bootmaker, was the prosecutor in the next case, he laying a charge of larceny against a brother Celestial. He swore that the prisoner had taken two opium and one water pipe from his (witness') cabin. Three pipes were produced by Mr. Aaronson, who said that the prisoner had pawned them at his store. The prosecutor recognized the pipes as his, but one of them his honor said was not plainly explained. It was what the Chinese use for smoking through water and in the information it was explained as a water pipe. His honor said it was a water tobacco pipe, and the clerk sid a tobacco water pipe. But that little discussion did not save the prisoner, who was sentenced to three months at hard labor.

Vancouver-Westminster Tramway.

It is announced that work will be commenced almost immediately on this electric tramway. A new survey of No. 3 has been ordered, and the engineers have been notified to begin their branch of the work. All this looks business-like, and if no further delay occurs the electric tramway between the two cities will be in full running order before midsummer of 1891.

Becoming Favorites.

Bistolfi and Mantanelli, the Spanish students, left by the Olympian this morning for the Sound, where they will endeavor to please their audiences as well as they did here. Saturday night's entertainment at the Y.M.C.A. rooms was not the least enjoyable of the few they have taken part in in Victoria, and the audience was thoroughly well satisfied with the music supplied by these two gentlemen. The local talent that took part also won applause, and it was well deserved.

Obituary.

The death of Wm. Grimason, at the age of 21 years and two months, will cause a pang of regret to every one with whom the young man was acquainted. He was the eldest son of Mr. John Grimason, of Quadra street, and has been ill since march last. He was first treated for typhoid fever, but on consultation of physicians it was found that one of his lungs was affected. Under Dr. Garrow's treatment he got somewhat better, but inflammation of the brain set in and he suffered greatly until his death. His end was easy and he died trusting in the Lord. The funeral will take place on Tuesday at two o'clock.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

STRUCK A MOUNTAIN OF MICA.

A Rich Find of this Mineral by a Prospecting Party.

On Thursday, the 6th inst., Louis Victor and a party of Indians returned from a seven weeks prospecting trip up the North Thompson River. They had twenty-five horses with them, and although they had difficult work, made the up journey of three hundred miles in less than two weeks. The country around the head waters of the river and the Tete Juane Cache was covered with a foot of snow. Notwithstanding this impediment to the work of prospecting, they located the mica mines in which they were in search of, camping at the mines three weeks, staking out claims.

The ledge they located shows 40 feet wide and 50 feet high on the side of the mountain, and indications are that they have struck a mountain of mica. Some fine samples were secured and brought to town, the largest of which was about 10x18 inches surface, and almost as clear as crystal. Some cubes of almost two feet were exposed in places, a slice from one of which was broken in two in being brought to town. The mica splits readily to any thickness desired and is undoubtedly of as good quality as can be obtained anywhere, and its locators have evidently struck it rich.

There was four feet of snow on the level when the party left the camp for home, and they experienced terrible hardships on the return trip, their horses suffering most, six of the animals dying from want of proper, nourishment. They found lots of grass, but it seemed to have no substance in it.—Inland Sentinel.

DYING ON THE ROADSIDE.

William Mann Found on the Saanich Road Bleeding from a Terrible Scalp Wound.

Lying on the public road, bleeding almost to death from a terrible wound, and unconscious from loss of blood, a party of men found William Mann yesterday as they drove to town along the Saanich road. It was without a moment's hesitation that the horses were stopped, and willing hands lifted the sufferer out of the damp grass into the wagon, where a bed of dry hay had been hurriedly made for him.

The spot was several miles from town and out of the reach of anything like medical assistance. The good Samaritans in this case had no ointment to pour into the wound.

The man was suffering from a frightful scalp wound, which displaced the entire top of the head as cleanly and clearly as though it had been carved with a sharp knife and lifted on one side. His benefactors were only rough working men, but kind hearted, and they bound up the head with a towel before starting for town where they hoped to get medical assistance.

The first place reached was the city police station, and here Chief Sheppard got a carriage and had the sufferer at once conveyed to the Royal Jubilee hospital where he now lies in a precarious state. Enquiries this morning elicited the information that he is likely to recover, but if he does it will be by a miracle of surgical skill.

William Mann is a bricklayer by trade. The wound is like one that would be received by falling out of a wagon and being partially run over.

WHY SHE WAS LATE.

The High-pressure Valve Breaks—Quick Repairs Effected in Victoria.

The steamer City of Kingston has, since her runs to this port commenced, achieved a reputation for making good time and reaching port according to the schedule, but on Saturday evening she was very late. When the Olympian arrived it was reported that the Kingston had been passed broken down in the Straits, but that assistance had not been required.

At nine o'clock the overdue steamer came in, when it was learned that when about twelve miles this side of Port Townsend, on her way over, the high-pressure slide valve broke, and the boat was stopped. Chief engineer Lent and first assistant Wolford at once got to work, and the broken valve was removed, it being smashed into about thirty pieces. The high pressure engine was thus totally disabled, but the abilities of the engineers got over this difficulty, the steam being allowed to blow through to the low pressure engine, and the voyage was continued at a somewhat reduced speed.

As soon as the boat reached harbor, the Albion Iron Works was communicated with, and pattern makers put to work on the pattern for a new valve. This was finished yesterday and last night at 6 o'clock the valve was cast, a special blast being made in the cupalo for the purpose. Early this morning the valve was put on the planer to be finished, and will be put in place to-morrow, and on Wednesday evening the City of Kingston will resume her regular trips. It is safe to say that no port north of San Francisco could the repairs have been made as quick, and is a strong proof of the resources of Victoria as a sea port.

Revival Meetings.

Yesterday, the evangelists, Messrs. Grant and Sederquist commenced their gospel services in the Courtenay street Presbyterian church, which has been prepared for this purpose. There were good congregations at both afternoon and evening services.

Amusements.

Concerning Gorton's Minstrels, who appear at Victoria Theatre Monday and Tuesday evenings, Nov. 17, 18, the St. John, N.B., Daily Sun says: Every seat in the institute was occupied last evening, and many were compelled to stand to witness the opening performance of Gorton's Minstrels. The show was a good one all through, and the audience was kept in almost continuous laughter. The circle made a fine impression at the start, and the songs were loudly and deservedly applauded. The quartette clog by Messrs. Welby and Pearl and Elliott brothers, and the dancing afterwards by the two latter, was received with the greatest enthusiasm. "He Sought for Gore," was the name of the concluding piece on the programme, and it sent the audience home happy.

Criminals Sentenced.

At Westminster on Saturday, Siumagh, the Indian who shot and killed Louis Beets, a halfbreed, some weeks ago, was sentenced to be hanged on January the 16th.

The Chinaman, who assaulted a little girl at Vancouver, was sent to the penitentiary for two years, and will also receive 24 lashes with a cat-o-nine-tails.

They Gathered a Crowd.

Late on Saturday night, a young man who is well known for his quiet manner was struck in the face and knocked down by an individual who makes a habit of painting the town red whenever he is in it. The young man was standing on Government street and spoke to his assailant as he was passing, but instead of receiving a reply, he was struck in the face. A lively scuffle took place, resulting in the bully getting a mud bath and a hustling that he won't forget for a time.

Broken by a Steamer.

Two pieces of a steamer's propeller, and the damaged portions of the Vancouver water pipes have been brought up from the bottom of the Narrows by the divers, and examined by the water works officials, who are satisfied that their claim that the pipe was broken by the Abyssinia is clearly proven, and to the pipe produced, the pieces of the propeller, the fact that only a ship of heavy tonnage would have reached deep enough in the water at low tide to strike the pipe, the fact that the Abyssinia went out at low tide and that shortly after she passed through the Narrows; to all these things they point as proof of their contention.

The Sports Dissatisfied.

Sporting men around the city became impressed with the idea on Saturday night that the McKay-McLean boat race had been sold, and so several of them ordered the stake holders not to pay over the money until the matter had been settled. They consider that there was several suspicious circumstances about the race, notably that McLean's backers were betting even on him when he was several yards behind and had hardly a chance of winning. Also, the fact that McLean caught a crab near the finish and then winning, they consider did not go much towards the race being fair. A large amount of money changed hands on the race, and there is general dissatisfaction among sports who were and are still confident that McKay can give McLean a good start and then leave him out of the race.

Several Reasons Why.

Why is Northfield coal the best?

1. It is the hardest.
2. Gives a hotter fire and consumes the least fuel.
3. It does not clinker.
4. Free from stone and slate.
5. It makes a cheerful fire burning free and clear.

Better than a Directory.

Now that all the real estate men have shown themselves sufficiently enterprising as to provide themselves with a first-class map of Victoria, time can be spared to serve private people. Hibben & Co.'s map of the city and surrounding district should be in every business house, and also in every private dwelling. For the latter purpose the map has been gotten out on a smaller scale, price 50 cents. It is better than a directory, and much handier in finding one's way round town.

An Old Abuse Revived.

Some time ago complaints reached the press and police about a character of rough appearance following and molesting ladies on the more secluded thoroughfares of the city. Either the same party has renewed his impertinences or some other fellow has purchased the goodwill of his business, for two or three complaints have been made within the last few days by frightened ladies, particularly in the vicinity of Christ Church cathedral and Churchway. Saturday evening two ladies were followed on their way home, which they reached feeling not at all at ease. They acquainted the gentlemen of the house with their experience, but when the gentlemen went outside there was nothing to be seen but a pair of heels beating the air with much vigor. Saturday evening seems to be the best and favorite time for plying this calling of molesting ladies.

A Lively Run.

A few days ago the TIMES called attention to the furious manner in which a hackman drove through the streets. Sunday Mr. Lawson repeated the performance, when he met with an accident that will keep him off the stand for some time at least. He started from the corner of Fort and Douglas streets at a tremendous rate, up Fort, along Blanchard, and had just turned the corner of Yates street when he was thrown off the box onto the street, falling on his head. The team kept on their course down Yates street, until their wild career was stopped by a street car coming up the street. They attempted to cross the track, but the hind part of the vehicle was struck by the car before they had succeeded. The hack was badly broken, but the horses and car escaped without a scratch. Lawson had his head badly cut, but the wound is not considered serious. About the liveliest part of the collision was when the occupants of the car tried to get out and crowded one another into the street.

17—6a.m.	47	29.8	S E by E	Cloudy
1p.m.	49.5	29.8	S E

A False Alarm.

An alarm of fire was carried to the Deluge engine house last night about half past nine o'clock, and box 31 was rung in. The raisers of the alarm said that the electric light work on Langley street were on fire, but when the department reached there no sign of fire could be seen, and nobody appeared to know why the alarm had been given, as there had been no fire. The firemen returned to their beds ill pleased with whoever may have been the cause of the needless alarm.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

A Distinguished Guest.

On the evening of Monday before Christmas the children of the Gorge road Methodist Sunday School will give a grand reception on their own account. The guest of honor will be Santa Claus who has been communicated with by the superintendent, and has graciously promised to be present. After the formal reception of this important personage, the children will entertain him, and their other guests with songs, recitations, tea and cake.

Coal Croppings Discovered.

What promises to prove a valuable coal discovery, says the Columbian, has been made on the farm of Mr. Annand, at Hall's Prairie. In sinking a well, at the depth of ten feet, says our special correspondent, a kind of broken spur or out-cropping of this valuable mineral was struck, and several pieces were extracted, which upon being tested, proved to be first class bituminous coal. Similar discoveries were also made on the adjoining farms. The owners are confident that a genuine bed of coal would be struck by boring, and intend to take steps to that end.

What McKay Says.

Speaking to a TIMES reporter to-day, Hughie McKay, the oarsman, who was defeated by McLean on Saturday, said that, although beaten he is still confident he can down McLean on a straight course. He explains his defeat by saying that he had been advised not to beat McLean by more than half a length, and that he did not attempt to increase his lead until the finish when he found it too late. McKay thinks that if he had started out and pulled his own way, the result would have been different. He would like very much to get up another race, and feels the defeat very keenly. He says that although the circumstances of the race indicated a throw-down, he did nothing of the kind, and is broke himself over the result.

Gorge Road Methodist Church.

The congregation of the Gorge Road Methodist church are making preparations for holding a concert on Tuesday, December 2nd, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the building fund of the new church. It is the intention to make every effort to ensure the concert's ranking only as first-class in every respect, and to this end the assistance of the best local talent has been secured. A pleasing feature of the attempt to build is found in the action of the children, to whom really belongs the credit of having lain the foundation stone of the building fund by contributing their own mite and soliciting contributions from others. The little ones appreciate the fact that every little helps.

A Scarcity of Vags.

A couple of little incidents that have happened lately have made some Victorians think that their town is infested with a lot of vags and idle persons. But the police have been too watchful to allow any accumulation of that class, and a visit around the lower class of saloons during the night has proved that their watchfulness has had good results. These saloons, when there are vags in town, are always filled with rough looking characters sleeping in the chairs, but not one of these characters could be spotted by a police officer who made it his business to watch the saloons for them. Vags, as a rule, have got no love for Victoria and her police force, and one visit here generally satisfies their eagerness to see this part of the world.

Trying to Make a Match.

Victorians seemed to have lost none of their grit on account of the race on Saturday, but in the reverse they seem to be anxious to get even on the Westminster men. McLean beat Bush badly in outriggers last year, but the latter thinks that he can beat McLean in shells, and he will try to do so tomorrow afternoon over the harbor course. All matters in connection with the match have been settled, and the stakes, $100 a side put up. McLean rows in Paine's shell and Bush in his own. McKay also wishes to try conclusions with McLean again, and has issued a challenge to that effect, and as McLean has issued a standing challenge to any man on the island the race will no doubt be arranged. McKay is considered by all who saw Saturday's race, to be the best man, and McLean's backers will find plenty of money if they make another race.

Found Drowned.

A miner named Geo. Stupaisky was found drowned in Nanaimo harbor on Saturday afternoon by an Indian. He was a native of Beaver Meadows, Carbon Co., Penn., where he leaves a family. He had been in Nanaimo for about nine months.

Thrown from a Buggy.

Mrs. Jno. Hill, of Cedar district, and Miss Cox, of Victoria, says the Free Press, met with an accident on Thursday. They were crossing the Nanaimo River bridge, when one of the planks gave way, throwing the horse down. The occupants were thrown out and Miss Cox had her side hurt, while her companion escaped injury.

A Coming Event.

The new Sunday School room of the Pandora Avenue Methodist church is expected to be ready for use in about a month or six weeks. In view of this event, the choir of the school under the direction of Mr. F. G. Richards, jr., are about preparing a programme suitable for the occasion. Judging by the past, no doubt a first-class entertainment will be provided. The first practice takes place to-morrow evening, and regular practices will be held every Tuesday evening until the time of opening the new schoolroom.

Something New.

Interesting free lectures, illustrated by a remarkable Historic Chart, sixty-eight feet long and seven feet wide, are being given by Miles Grant, of Boston, in the Old Presbyterian Church, on Courtney street, every evening this week, at 7.45. One special object of these lectures is to present positive proof that the Bible is a divinely inspiring Book. These lectures have been given, with very happy results, in the principal cities of twenty-seven States; also in the leading cities of Scotland, Ireland, England and Italy. *

The Churchman's Opinion.

The Evangelical Churchman (Toronto) of November 6th says: We are sorry to hear that BishopIlls, of British Columbia, has come out against the proposed consolidation of the Church in Canada. We regret that his lordship, by the tone of his annual charge prejudiced the question in the eyes of his Diocesan Synod. The objections put forth by the bishop are chiefly concerned with a criticism of details, and the grand idea of church unity is apparently ignored because the details are not altogether satisfactory. In view of the fact that this diocese was unrepresented at the Winnipeg Conference, owing to the apathy of its delegates, we submit that this is a somewhat selfish policy of isolation to pursue on the part of British Columbia churchmen. We trust they will reconsider the matter.

Guessing Match.

Cameron has beaten himself this time. He's sold me goods $2.00 too cheap. I know it, because I priced the same line of goods at another store before going to Cameron's. Ha! ha! ha! ha! he! he! he! he! ho! ho!

THE JOKE IS

that our much tickled man has paid Cameron's usual price, which is always lower than elsewhere.

The Man that's Beat

is the man that has been paying two prices so long that when he gets a fair deal he thinks it's all a mistake.

WHEN IT STRIKES HIM

that, instead of beating us $2.00 now, he's been beaten heretofore on every trade, you'll see that laugh strikes in like colic. But he'll stick to us now he's tried us.
